Presidential Search Committee
Nevada State University
Henderson, Nevada

Dear Members of the Search Committee:

I am pleased to submit my candidacy for President of Nevada State University, an institution whose commitment to student success, access, and regional impact reflects the core values that have shaped my career in public higher education. As a first-generation college student, I have experienced firsthand the transformative power of educational opportunity and the importance of institutions that meet students where they are while preparing them for meaningful careers and engaged citizenship. Nevada State's mission to serve a diverse and rapidly growing student population in Southern Nevada strongly resonates with me, particularly given its trajectory as one of the fastest-growing public institutions of its kind.

I currently serve as Executive Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost at Rutgers University–Camden, and previously as Dean of the Manning School of Business at the University of Massachusetts Lowell. Both institutions are federally designated Minority-Serving Institutions and enroll significant populations of first-generation college students. These environments have shaped my leadership approach—one that prioritizes access, student success, and institutional responsibility to the communities we serve. Having grown up in Wyoming and worked extensively in Colorado, I also bring a personal understanding of the opportunities and challenges facing institutions in the West.

Across more than 25 years of leadership in higher education, including service as a provost, dean, department chair, and faculty member, I have focused on strengthening student success, expanding academic pathways, cultivating teaching excellence, and connecting universities with workforce and community priorities. In the sections that follow, I describe how my experience aligns with the expectations for the president outlined in your position profile.

Strategic and Visionary Leadership

My leadership experience spans the full lifecycle of institutional strategy, with particular strength in executing strategic plans in complex, multi-campus environments. As provost at Rutgers-Camden, I have led implementation of the campus strategic plan across the academic enterprise, so that priorities are translated into coordinated action across academic programs, faculty hiring, interdisciplinary initiatives, and resource allocation.

A central aspect of this work has been connecting strategic priorities to institutional growth. I have led efforts to expand academic programs, strengthen enrollment pathways, and build capacity in areas of emerging demand, with a focus on making growth intentional and grounded in institutional mission. A key component of this work is building and sustaining strong leadership teams, collaborating closely with deans and academic leaders to align priorities, develop leadership capacity, and strengthen succession planning.

My experience also includes significant involvement in capital planning and campus development. At the University of Massachusetts Lowell, I worked closely with architects, planners, faculty, and senior leadership throughout the latter design and early-occupancy phases of the $47 million Pulichino Tong Business Center. As provost, I serve on the Cooper Street Gateway Project committee, a $60 million initiative integrating academic space, historic preservation, and community engagement. In both settings, I have ensured that physical infrastructure supports academic priorities, student success, and institutional mission.

Earlier in my career as a CPA, I worked with residential and commercial construction clients, gaining practical experience in the financial and operational dimensions of large-scale projects. This background informs my approach to capital planning, reinforcing the importance of integrating financial stewardship, institutional vision, and long-term sustainability.

In addition to my work in higher education, my leadership roles in national and global organizations have involved strategic planning, governance, and organizational transformation, strengthening my ability to connect diverse stakeholders and translating strategy into measurable outcomes.

Student Success and Retention

Student success has been central to my leadership, particularly at institutions serving large populations of first-generation, Pell-eligible, and transfer students. As provost, I have collaborated closely with my team to advance retention and persistence for first-time and transfer students, improve time to degree, and enhance advising and academic support systems.

This work includes aligning curriculum with advising, strengthening transfer pathways, and implementing coordinated strategies across academic and student success units to ensure students remain on track. These efforts are grounded in a data-informed, student-centered approach that emphasizes clear pathways, timely guidance, and meaningful engagement. At Rutgers-Camden, this sustained focus on access and outcomes has contributed to national recognition as a top 10 institution for social mobility by U.S. News & World Report.

A hallmark of my leadership has also been cultivating student engagement and high-quality teaching. In collaboration with faculty, we have enhanced instructional practices, advising, and experiential learning opportunities. While my own teaching has been recognized through multiple awards, I view teaching excellence as a shared institutional responsibility that must be advanced through intentional investment and collaboration.

Community-Centric Leadership

Throughout my career, I have positioned universities as deeply connected partners in the communities they serve, connecting academic programs with regional workforce and civic priorities. As Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost, I regularly engage with civic leaders, nonprofit organizations, and regional employers to ensure that academic initiatives reflect community needs and create meaningful opportunities for students.

In collaboration with community and industry partners across Rutgers-Camden, the University of Massachusetts Lowell, and Xavier University, we have expanded internships, experiential learning, and community-engaged learning opportunities. These efforts strengthen the connection between academic programs and real-world experience while advancing regional talent development. At UMass Lowell, this also included expanding cooperative education opportunities, providing students with structured, applied learning experiences that integrate academic study with professional practice.

My leadership extends beyond the university through extensive service on nonprofit boards and professional organizations focused on health, education, and public benefit. I have chaired and served on boards at the local, national, and global levels, partnering with diverse stakeholders to advance shared goals and strengthen community impact.

These experiences reflect a sustained commitment to community engagement that aligns closely with Nevada State's mission and its role in supporting the economic and civic vitality of Southern Nevada, particularly in high-demand fields such as healthcare, education, and business.

Shared Governance, Transparency, and Inclusivity

I lead through a collaborative and transparent approach that values shared governance and inclusive decision-making. As provost, I collaborate closely with governance bodies, including the Faculty Senate, University Senate, and campus-level councils, as well as with the Student Government Association, staff groups, and faculty unions. Across these settings, I focus on building strong relationships, fostering trust, and ensuring that governance processes are meaningful, well-informed, and effective.

Working with faculty leaders, we have clarified workload expectations, advanced faculty career progression, and developed mentoring and advancement pathways, including initiatives that support progression from associate to full professor and expand leadership development opportunities.

Given my background as a CPA and CMA, I have been intentional in improving transparency around financial and resource allocation decisions. I regularly engage governance groups in discussions about budget models, resource constraints, and strategic investments, helping to build a shared understanding of how decisions are made and how resources advance institutional priorities. This approach has strengthened trust and enabled more informed, collaborative decision-making.

My approach to shared governance is also informed by more than 25 years of experience serving on and leading boards of directors at the local, national, and global levels. I have applied principles of strong governance, role clarity, accountability, and succession planning within the university setting by refining committee structures, encouraging inclusive participation, and strengthening governance processes over time.

At the system level, I engage regularly with governance through the Rutgers Board of Governors (BOG) by representing the Chancellor or serving on the BOG Committee on Academic and Student Affairs, maintaining coordination between campus priorities and system expectations. Across these contexts, I prioritize open communication, clear decision-making processes, and inclusive participation.

I view shared governance as essential to institutional strength, so that decisions reflect the collective expertise of the university community while advancing student success and mission.

Fiscal Responsibility and Sustainability

Financial stewardship is a core responsibility of university leadership. As a CPA and CMA and as an accounting scholar, I bring deep expertise in financial management, transparency, and risk assessment, along with extensive experience overseeing academic budgets and resource allocation in complex higher-education environments.

In partnership with deans and administrative leaders, we have directed resources toward institutional priorities, advanced enrollment growth, and diversified revenue through program development and partnerships. This includes developing undergraduate and graduate certificate programs, expanding online and professional offerings, and establishing partnerships with other institutions, corporate partners, and community organizations that generate new revenue streams while advancing the mission.

During my deanship at the University of Massachusetts Lowell, the business school received significant philanthropic investments, including a $10 million alumni gift—matched by a $5 million foundation contribution—to endow faculty positions, as well as a $3 million gift to endow the deanship. I spent considerable time cultivating donor relationships and advancing fundraising efforts, thereby strengthening partnerships and fostering a sustainable culture of philanthropy.

In my current role as provost, I continue to collaborate with academic and administrative leaders to advance financial sustainability through program expansion, strategic partnerships, and careful stewardship of resources. I regularly engage academic leaders in discussions about budget models, cost structures, and investment priorities, ensuring that financial decisions are transparent, consistent with institutional goals, and conducive to long-term stability.

I approach financial sustainability as an integrated effort that connects academic planning, enrollment strategy, and resource development, so that growth is both mission-driven and financially sound.

Academics and Enrollment

My leadership experience includes extensive work in curriculum development, program expansion, accreditation, assessment, and continuous quality improvement. At both UMass Lowell and Rutgers-Camden, I have collaborated with deans and faculty to enhance academic programs, develop interdisciplinary initiatives, and build pathways connected to workforce and community needs, including high-demand fields such as health, education, and business.

A central focus of my work has been to build and sustain strong academic programs through intentional faculty development and planning. At Rutgers-Camden, my team and I lead an annual cohort-based Faculty Leadership Program designed to prepare faculty for leadership roles and strengthen institutional capacity. In addition, we offer dozens of workshops each year focused on teaching innovation and effective student engagement. Supporting faculty in building strong, sustainable careers, including clear pathways for advancement and leadership development, is a core priority of my leadership.

As both a dean and a provost, I have led the development of short-term and long-term faculty hiring plans that reflect institutional priorities, workforce demand, and emerging academic opportunities. These efforts ensure that programs are appropriately resourced, responsive, and positioned for continued growth.

I bring extensive experience in accreditation and assessment, both within my institutions and nationally. At Rutgers, I serve on the university-wide accreditation leadership team and have participated in accreditation review teams for other institutions, contributing to institutional self-study, quality assurance, and continuous improvement efforts.

At UMass Lowell, during a period of rapid institutional growth, I led business school initiatives that resulted in significant enrollment expansion, including growth in graduate programs and online offerings. At Rutgers-Camden, I have worked closely with deans to stabilize enrollment through program innovation, strengthen academic pathways, and improve coordination between academic and enrollment strategies.

I also bring considerable experience building collaborative pathways with high schools, community colleges, and other universities, creating structured transfer, dual-enrollment, and degree-completion opportunities that advance both access and progression.

Co-curricular integration and student engagement have been consistent priorities throughout my leadership. I have supported student participation in professional organizations, leadership programs, and experiential learning opportunities that connect academic preparation with meaningful career pathways. My service in roles such as International President of Beta Alpha Psi reflects this long-standing commitment to student engagement and professional readiness.

Closing

Nevada State University's commitment to access, student success, and regional impact, combined with its rapid growth and strong momentum, makes it a compelling opportunity for leadership. I would welcome the opportunity to work in partnership with faculty, staff, students, alumni, and system and community leaders to build on this foundation and contribute to the continued growth and impact of Nevada State. Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,

- Serving as co-chair of Vice-Chancellor for University Relations search (fall 2022)
- Developed partnership with the UMass Medical School (a separate university in the UMass system) to offer a dual degree program for students in the School of Medicine, Graduate School of Biomedical Sciences, and Graduate School of Nursing to complete graduate business degrees concurrently with their medical school program.
- Collaborated with College of Engineering to grow and enhance curriculum processes for M.S. in Engineering Management program. Includes business college support of over 50% of curriculum and 300% program growth over four years.
- Partnered with College of Engineering on development of B.S., M.S. and Ph.D. program in industrial engineering.
- Developed co-curricular and academic program initiatives with other UMass Lowell colleges including health sciences, engineering, fine arts, humanities, social sciences with degree paths in the following areas: exercise science, nutrition, and wellness, pharmaceutical sciences, biomedical and biotech engineering.

- Led opportunities and funding programs for interdisciplinary research with business faculty and colleagues in science, health science, engineering, fine arts, humanities, social sciences, and UMMS.
- Supported and mentored faculty leader in delivery of Biotech East program (2019-2022) in collaboration with the American Society of Cell Biology and sponsored by Biogen. This program offers leadership development education for postdocs in biotech and related areas.

Mission, vision, strategic planning, risk management, and resource allocation initiatives:

- Led collaborative development of long-term strategic plan with five primary goals focusing on 1) high quality, accessible business school education; 2) extending research reach; 3) increasing opportunities for interdisciplinary collaboration; 4) increasing experiential education; and 5) brand building with the business and academic community.
- Completed comprehensive revision process for college mission and vision statement in 2019 to align with university goals and AACSB accreditation requirements.
- Developed internal controls and risk management procedures for all resource, expenditure, and budgetary processes.
- Responsible for all budgetary oversight.
- Raised awareness through education and communication to faculty of factors associated with key risks in student mental health, student retention, competitive analysis, research advancement, university level crisis reporting, first generation initiatives, and accreditation.
- Developed leadership opportunities for college faculty through new roles such as Director of Faculty Mentoring, Director of Assessment, Co-directors for two college-based centers with university-wide missions.

Increased transparency and communication to internal and external stakeholders:

- Led development of Manning Experience professional communication process to build transparency, advance inclusion, and raise awareness of events, trends, and opportunities related to over 9,000 stakeholders including students, faculty, staff, alumni, employers, and local, regional, national and global community partners.
- Developed internal ManningNews communication processes for distribution of consistent, transparent, communications to Manning community.
- Developed processes to establish presence and significant growth in all college social media platforms and key branding initiatives.

Research and scholarship success – significant increases in:

- Research productivity growth resulting from changes in scholarly culture. Ongoing focus on supporting university goals for progression from R2 to R1 resulting in year-over-year increases in faculty and doctoral student research productivity. Over 350 faculty publications in five year period ending with 2018 AACSB accreditation cycle. Continued progress for 2018-2021 with yearly gains in peer-reviewed journal articles in high quality journals based on impact factors and the Financial Times 50 list. Supported related research activities leading to increased faculty service as editors, on editorial review boards, and leadership in their respective academic associations.

- Research speaker series events featuring top researchers from external universities in accounting, finance, marketing, entrepreneurship, and information systems.
- Conference presentations by tenured and tenure track faculty (peer-reviewed submissions).
- Invited presentations for all types of faculty (corporate community, professional associations, etc.).
- Number of instructional practitioners earning scholarly practitioner status.
- Funding available for faculty conference and/or professional development participation (all faculty ranks).
- Sponsorships of academic conferences to elevate support of faculty leadership roles.
- Internal seed grants for faculty research.
- Funding available for research databases and other key scholarly resources.
- Collaborations with library team to develop research performance reporting processes.

Accreditation and curriculum/program development:

- Completed accreditation cycles for AACSB, fulfilled university requirements for regional (NECHE) and UMass system (AQAD).
- Ongoing service as Peer Review Team chair or dean member for several peer university AACSB reaccreditation teams.
- UMass Medical School dual degree program (see above).
- Evolved ongoing and new M.S. programs and graduate certificate programs.
- Enhanced curriculum processes for M.S. in Engineering Management.
- Supported development of collaborative and interdisciplinary initiatives with other UMass Lowell colleges with co-curricular engagement or business program integration including health sciences, engineering, fine arts, humanities, social sciences.

Other college-related growth initiatives:

- Hired 30% of full-time faculty in college (as of 2022). Faculty growth includes incremental positions and replacements.
- Led move to new business school building after decades of residing in previous location. Implemented several initiatives to boost college culture during transition and beyond.
- Worked collaboratively with faculty and union to revise workload agreement and develop standards for research-active, research-productive, and research-intensive faculty qualifications and map to AACSB qualifications agreed upon by faculty.
- Collaborated with university finance, accounting, and human resource leaders to obtain a 33% increase in structural funding for PhD students' stipend support. Grew PhD program by 40% for 2021 admissions cycle. As of January 2022, overall PhD program growth of 87% with inclusion of part-time students.

Academic Experience – Xavier University (2004–2016)

Xavier University is a private, nonprofit Jesuit Catholic university in Cincinnati, Ohio. During my tenure from 2004 to 2016, the university enrolled approximately 6,500 students. I held progressive academic and leadership roles in the Williams College of Business and across the university.

Associate Dean, Williams College of Business, 2014 – 2016

As Associate Dean, I led strategic academic initiatives supporting over 1,700 students across graduate and undergraduate programs. I oversaw AACSB accreditation processes, managed a $16M direct cost budget, and collaborated across departments on curriculum development, student success, and operational efficiency. I chaired the redesign of the Executive MBA program—achieving a 200% enrollment increase—and oversaw the launch of the Emerging Leaders MBA with enrollment at 175% of budget. I worked closely with department chairs and faculty to advance academic quality and student engagement, while fostering external partnerships with industry, government, and nonprofit organizations. My leadership also encompassed faculty mentoring, board relations, strategic planning, and the cultivation of a collaborative, mission-aligned academic culture.

Director of Faculty Programs – Center for Mission & Identity, 2013 – 2014

In this university-level role, I supported faculty development and institutional mission integration. I helped design and deliver programming that encouraged faculty to align their academic work with the university's Jesuit values and identity.

Chair, Department of Accountancy and Business Law, 2007 – 2014

I provided academic leadership to the department, overseeing curriculum development, faculty hiring and mentoring, assessment, and student engagement. I promoted innovation in teaching and learning, supported interdisciplinary collaboration, and strengthened external partnerships.

Professor of Accountancy, 2010 – 2016

After earning promotion to full professor with tenure, I continued teaching and conducting research in accounting information systems, corporate governance, and strategic performance measurement. I contributed actively to national academic associations and editorial boards.

Associate Professor of Accountancy, 2004 – 2010

Upon joining Xavier University, I focused on advancing curriculum development, supporting accreditation, and building a robust teaching and research profile. My work emphasized accounting education, applied technology, and academic service.

Appendix 1 – Community Engagement

I have maintained a long-standing commitment to community engagement at the local, regional, national, and global levels. I have served as a board member for multiple health-focused nonprofits, including a hospital-affiliated outreach program and an autoimmune disease foundation, providing leadership in fundraising, financial oversight, and technology strategy. My community service extends to a wide array of health and welfare organizations, including children's homes, shelters, arts and cultural institutions, and Dress for Success. I advise university alumni boards and mentor entrepreneurs in sectors ranging from aviation to nonprofits and mid-market technology. Additionally, I have collaborated with global technology leaders—Salesforce, Microsoft, Oracle, and PeopleSoft—advising on curriculum integration and educational innovation, including service on multiple academic advisory boards. I also volunteered with Scouts BSA Troop 750 from 2009 to 2016, where I supported youth leadership development through civic programming and outdoor education as an Eagle Scout parent.
