2. BACKGROUND & POLICY CONTEXT OF ISSUE:
Although the Board of Regents is the employer of all NSHE faculty and staff, the lack of policy to allow the sharing of personnel, payroll and other confidential information between institutions and units regarding current and former employees, prevents NSHE institutions from being fully informed when making hiring decisions.

Current policy does not address sharing of personnel, payroll and other confidential information among NSHE institutions and units. - Current Board policy does not address the sharing of personnel, payroll and confidential information regarding current or former employees who apply for positions or work as an independent contractor at other NSHE institutions or units.
- Current policy in Section 5.6 limits who has access to personnel and payroll information.
- The Board of Regents is the employer for all NSHE faculty and staff, but has delegated appointing authority to the presidents.
- There should not be any impediment to sharing information between NSHE institutions and units.
- In the absence of policy that specifically addresses the right to share personnel, payroll and other confidential information, institutions have not been able to share such information.
- Institutions should have access to a current and former employee’s personnel, payroll and other confidential information when considering whether to hire the current or former employee.
- The proposed amendment provides a process for requesting the information.
- The proposed amendment allows institutions to consider the information it receives in making the hiring decision.
- At the request of the Business Officers, the provision giving a denied employee or applicant the opportunity to respond has been deleted. This provision should be deleted because it would create an undue administrative burden and no one else is given the opportunity to respond if they are not hired.
